LEE CENTER MAN, IN JAIL, FACES ANOTHER HEARING AFTER TERM

Moonshine Gets William McAllister Into Real Trouble.

The village of Lee Center is much aroused over the actions of William McAllister, a resident of that place, who was arrested Sunday afternoon by Deputy Sheriff Swan Sandberg of the village. The arrest resulted from a quarrel in the McAllister home Sunday in which he is said to have brutally beaten his wife. He was brought to Dixon Sunday and lodged in the county jail to await a preliminary hearing.

Yesterday afternoon McAllister was taken back to Lee Center to face Justice Perry R. Dewey. State's Attorney Mark Keller appeared for the state—a charge of assault and battery being preferred. Justice Dewey assessed a fine of $25 and costs, which the defendant could not pay and he was brought back to Dixon to lay out the fine and costs in the county jail.

Faces Liquor Charge.

Information was filed in the county court yesterday by State's Attorney Keller, charging McAllister with transporting liquor on a public highway. At the conclusion of his present jail term he will be taken into county court to answer to the second charge.

McAllister is said to have received a check for $15 Saturday for work he had completed and $12 of this amount he is alleged to have spent for a half gallon of liquor and another dollar and a half to have taken home. It is charged he had consumed more than half of the liquor when he was arrested at his home, and according to reports from the village had not provided any food for his wife and five children, who are now being cared for by Supervisor Gooch.

Supply of Price- Breaking Bread is Suddenly Cut Off

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Tiffin, O., Jan. 18.—Mayor Unger, who on Monday and Tuesday sold Tiffin folks Toledo-made bread at 6 cents a loaf, in his effort to force Tiffin bakers to reduce their price from 8 cents to 6 cents on the pound loaf, was unable to get a loaf of bread from Toledo today. The Toledo firm which he had arranged for a daily supply notified him that "under conditions" it could no longer supply him.

Unger charges that "pressure evidently has been brought to bear to stop the Toledo supply from reaching Tiffin." He called on Tiffin housewives to continue their bread strike and declared that if he is able to procure an oven he will establish a municipal bakery which will supply bread at five cents a loaf.

TWO NEW STREET CARS FOR USE IN STERLING ARRIVE

Modern in Every Particular; May Be Tried Here.

Two bright, new street cars of the very latest model and design, equipped with all of the standard safety appliances and devices, were delivered to the Sterling, Dixon & Eastern railway yesterday afternoon, coming from the Cleveland Car Company. The cars are not for use in Dixon but will be taken to Sterling where they will be put in service.

The cars will be unloaded and taken to the barns on Madison avenue where they will be fitted up ready to be put into service. They will doubtless be given a trial workout over the local city lines, before being taken to Sterling. The new equipment is the latest word in modern street car construction. They are equipped with all of the latest safety devices and were built on special contract for the purpose of giving the best service obtainable to the citizens of Sterling.

Air brakes will replace the old chain brake. The motorman instead of operating the car from the middle of the platform, occupies the left hand corner of the vestibule. The cars are of the pay-as-you-enter design. They are electrically heated and the doors admitting the passengers are operated by air as on the heavy cars used in city service. The cars are of the single truck design with an increased seating capacity. The cars are very neatly finished inside and out and will prove a wonderful improvement to the service in Sterling. It is only to be regretted that like equipment is not available at this time for the Dixon city lines.

Ouster Proceedings Against Sheriff of Ardmore, Oklahoma

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Ardmore, Okla., Jan. 18.—Attorneys for Sheriff Buck Garrett of Carter county, defendant in ouster proceedings brought by Attorney General S. P. Freeling, on the ground that the law has not been enforced lately in the county, announced as district court convened today that they would call for cross examination many witnesses whose depositions describing alleged vice conditions were read yesterday.

Ninety-four depositions were read. They were introduced to support a motion by the state that Sheriff Garrett be suspended from office pending the outcome of his trial on misconduct charges. Those charges, state attorneys said, cannot come up until the motion to suspend has been acted on by the court.

Sheriff Garrett is one of four officials in this county whose ouster has been requested. The charges are the outgrowth of the killing of three men near Wilson, Okla., several weeks ago. The charges against the others, it is expected, will be taken up later. The witnesses called for cross examination today, defense counsel said would be questioned concerning allegations their depositions made of open gambling, illegal sale of liquor and immorality.

PROCLAMATION
Beginning Thursday, Jan. 19 and continuing until Saturday evening, Jan. 21, a campaign for funds to carry on the very worthy work of the Salvation Army will be conducted. The funds so raised will be devoted to state and local needs.

This organization which won for itself the love and gratitude of "Our Boys Over There" should be liberally supported in this drive.

When all the world is in a mad scramble, with suspicion on every hand, the Salvation Army stands the embodiment of service and unselfishness. Let us show our appreciation liberally.

MARK D. SMITH,
Mayor

Tomorrow morning fourteen committees of business men will start solicitation of funds for the Salvation Army and local charities, and it is believed that the quota of $2,000 will be raised by Saturday night—the date set for the end of the drive. Several advance subscriptions have been reported, among them being: Dixon Elks, $100; Knights of Columbus, $50; Dixon Telephone Co., $25; Kiwanis Club, $15.

All of the fund over $1000—which amount goes to the Salvation Army for its relief and rescue work in Illinois—will be used for charitable work in Dixon and vicinity, under the direction of Louis Pitcher, Charles Miller and A. W. Leland, the executive committee of the local Salvation Army advisory board.

Unusual Suit Before Brooklyn Supreme Ct.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
New York, Jan. 18.—The Supreme Court in Brooklyn today will hear the suit of former Lieut. Commander Howard S. Keep against the South Seas Pacific and the Pacific Development Company, for an option in the co-operative.

The former American naval officer, was said to have obtained the option through the friendship of a Samoan Princess and her father, while he was in command of the wireless station on the island of Tutuila.

Commander Keep returned to New York in June, 1919, and, according to his story, made an arrangement with the Pacific Development Company to take up the option and form the South Seas Pacific Company, to trade in Copra. The yacht, Ajax, was bought to carry a party to Samoa, and Keep, after resigning from the navy, shipped as one of the yacht's crew.

In his complaint he says that a stop was made at Bernadua, and there he was left ashore in his sailor suit, the yacht starting away with his clothes and papers.

Swindell, Jr., economic author, was to speak on the place of optimism in business revival and the status of the foreign debt.

Open forums will be declared after each speech during the sessions and the subjects gone into until all angles have been explained.

Electric Railroads Must Raise Rate on Intrastate Freight

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Jan. 18.—Rates charged by electric railroads and short line steam railroads in Illinois for transportation of freight and of milk and cream wholly within the state must be increased, the Interstate Commerce Commission decided today, to conform with the levels of Interstate rates on the same products. The commission decided that the existence of state rates on a lower basis than the interstate rates constituted discrimination against interstate traffic.

QUICK, WARREN, HEAD HIM OFF

REMEMBER THIS IF YOU'RE HELD UP IN CHICAGO

Chicago Chief Issues "Don't" for Stick- Up Victims.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Jan. 18.—Michael Hughes, chief of detectives, made public today a list of "don'ts" for Chicago citizens who wish to assist him in making holdups and robberies unprofitable. The list, points of which would apply elsewhere, the chief follows:

- 1—Don't carry large sums of money or valuable jewelry at night.
- 2—Don't fail to be always on the alert for "stick-up" men; by anticipating them you may circumvent them.
- 3—Run, if you have the opportunity on being accosted.
- 4—Don't resist, if caught unawares and the "drop" is on you.

"I say 'don't resist'," the chief asserted, "because life is more valuable than money and most of the present day thugs will kill unhesitatingly. It is not a coward, but a prudent man who runs away from robbers."

"To know how to avoid holdup men one must first know how they operate."

Ninety per cent of the robberies are done by automobile bandits who swoop down on a pedestrian at a lonely spot. If the pedestrian is alert he will turn about and be ready to flee the instant one starts toward him. Robbers will not shoot at a running man and neither will a policeman, unless he is certain the man is a criminal."

Council Acts on Paving Project

The city council in its regular weekly meeting last evening paid semi-monthly bills against the city in the amount of $1,045.48. Local improvement resolution, No. 204, originating a scheme for the big paving project on the south side was passed by a unanimous vote. Anna Jensen Moore was appointed by Mayor Mark D. Smith to levy the assessment, the appointment being concurred by all of the members of the commission. A voucher for $2,200 was ordered paid to the American Plumbing & Heating Co. for work on local improvement ordinance No. 201. The council voted unanimously to send Mayor Mark D. Smith to Urbana to attend the eighth annual convention of the Illinois Municipal league to represent the city of Dixon, which is a member.

ATHLETICS' SEASON PROBABLY ENDS WITH DEFEAT AT MORRISON

Manager Will Attempt to Cancel Remaining Contests.

The Dixon Athletics probably closed their season with last evening's game with the Morrison Regulars in the opening a basketball tournament in Morrison, Ill., which the locals lost two games. The team has a number of out-of-town engagements to fill, some of which will be cancelled, and all if possible, according to the statement given out by Manager Grover Wilhelm this morning.

The A. C.'s drove down to Morrison again last evening and were defeated by the reorganized Regulars by the close score of 19 to 18. Harrington and Feldman caged five and four baskets respectively for the Regulars and one free throw spelled defeat for Dixon.

In the first half, Morrison piled up a good lead, the period ending with the count standing 15 to 7 in their favor. In the second half, the Athletics changed their lineup, Vaughan jumping center and Hees entering the fray. The Regulars were held to two baskets in the last half, the A. C.'s running up 11 counts.

Hess and Vaughan played a stellar game for Dixon, the former participating in only a part of the contest. Green, Allen, Weinert and Poole got into the game in an effort to run up a count sufficient to overcome Morrison's lead, but were unsuccessful. The game was one of clean basketball from start to finish and several Dixon fans accompanied the Athletics to view the second game of the tournament. Coach Bowers of this city umpired the contest.

HOUSE NOW HAS BILL TO CHANGE RESERVE BOARD

Senate Passed Measure to Give Farmer a Place.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Jan. 18.—It remained for the house today to complete enactment of the bill passed by the senate to give the farmer representation on the federal reserve board. The Kellogg-Smith compromise bill increasing the appointive membership of the board from five to six and providing that the agriculture interests shall have a spokesman among them was provided by the senate late yesterday, by a vote of 63 to 9, the opposition including seven Republicans and two Democrats.

Wiping out by amendment the clause of the federal reserve act providing specifically for the maintaining of the two bankers of the board, the bill would substitute a provision directing the President in making appointments, to have "due regard to a fair representation of the financial, industrial, agriculture and economic interests in geographical divisions of the country." Although a heated debate preceded the vote on the bill, there were many attempts to change the compromise provisions, which bore the approval not only of all the agricultural bloc leaders in the senate, but President Harding as well, prevailed.

Fire Every 43 Min. During Year of '21

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Springfield, Ill., Jan. 18.—Although Illinois averaged a fire every forty-three minutes in 1921, the $18,329,550 loss showed a decrease of $1,324,872 under the 1920 loss, according to John G. Gamber, state fire marshal. The 12,356 fires in the state last year were 1911 fewer than in 1920. The decreases for 1921 are the first since the war, Mr. Gamber said.

"The Armour elevator explosion loss in Chicago is included in the totals for last year, although the bulk of the damage was due to explosion and not to fire, Mr. Gamber's preliminary report stated. "If this loss were not included, the net decrease in 1921 would be $3,824,572."

RECTOR OF OAK PARK CHURCH IS AMONG MISSING

Disappeared from His Home Saturday as Family Dined.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Jan. 18.—Search was being conducted here today for the Rev. William E. Taylor, pastor of St. Christopher's Episcopal church of Oak Park, said to have been missing since Saturday when he left the table at which his wife and three children were seated and wandered countless from the room.

According to information received by the Rev. George Craig Stewart, brother-in-law of the missing man, and pastor in an Evanston church, Rev. Mr. Taylor notified Bishop Anderson on Saturday, that he wished some one to care for his pastorate for two or three days. Rev. Mr. Stewart was at a loss to explain the disappearance and expressed confidence that his brother-in-law would come to his family within a short time.

The minister for 25 years was an insurance company employee, starting as an office boy in Boston and resigning as superintendent of the Chicago district to enter the ministry.

Shows Way to Stop Waste, Unemployment in Nation's Industry

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Cleveland, O., Jan. 18.—Unemployment may be eliminated and business booms and depressions controlled by a consolidation of management in industry, J. Parke Channing of New York told members of the National Convention of the Associated General Contractors today. Mr. Channing is vice president of the American Engineering Council and chairman of the council's committee on elimination of waste in industry.

"It is unfortunate that in a country like the United States, we should have idle men," he said, "when we have such rich resources and such demands for finished goods. A large proportion of this unemployment is due to hooms."

"The way in which the owners in industry may be of value in the elimination of waste, is in stabilizing production. They are to persons, more than any others, who can prevent or at least reduce the peaks and valleys of booms and depressions."

He cited soft coal mining as an example of a poorly organized industry. "It is over-equipped," he said, "both as regards plant and personnel, and the soft coal miner, instead of being able to get 300 days of work as he should, gets, I believe, about 190, and this means that there are altogether too many men ready to mine coal, and that part of them should be diverted to other industries and the balance assured regular and continuous work."

Copy of Telegraph of May 22, 1873

Hollis Prescott brought to the Telegraph office recently a copy of the Telegraph of Thursday, May 22, 1873, in a good state of preservation for such an old paper.

The first page is devoted to large cuts, of pictures, one of the bridge before the disaster here May 3rd, 1873 and one taken afterward. C. H. Keyes made the photographs. There are advertisements on the front page, including the ad of O. B. Dodge telling of the merits of "Gents' Underwear," and also that of Dimick & Pratt advertising boots and shoes. James H. Todd's ad tells of Broadway silk hats, and there are many others. But the whole trend of the publication carries to this day the spirit and atmosphere of grief and sorrow which enveloped the community following the great bridge disaster.

PROGRAM IS DECIDED UPON BY REPUBLICAN SENATORS AT CAUCUS

Expect Bonus Measure to Follow One in Senate Now.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Jan. 18.—Decision to press first the allied debt refunding bill and next a soldiers' bonus bill was recommended today by republican senators in their first conference in the first session of conference. The conference was called to discuss details of the two measures.

Opposition to a soldiers' bonus bill developed but it was announced officially that the motion to place this legislation second in the list, was carried by "a large majority." Elimination by the finance committee of the requirement in the allied debt bill for semi-annual payment of interest on the bonds to be accepted from the foreign debtor nations also was discussed but a decision on this feature of the bill was deferred.

It was reported that the vote in favor of passing a bonus bill was 31 to 2, with several opponents of such legislation withholding their votes. While the conference did not approve the pending bill some republican leaders said the measure to be passed undoubtedly would follow the general principles of the measure now before the finance committee.

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Walters declares he saw two men hammered to death with a pick axe handle by sergeants. One prisoner was clubbed because he failed to work fast enough to suit the sergeant in scrubbing the floor with a tooth brush, Walters asserts.

Tobacco Companies

Face Govt. Charge

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Washington, Jan. 18.—Three of the principal tobacco manufacturing companies—the American Tobacco Company, the P. Lorillard and Liggett &

Meyers Tobacco Company—were charged with engaging in conspiracy with numerous jobber's associations to keep up jobber's price in a report transmitted today to the senate by the Federal Trade Commission.

The three companies, the commission declared in giving the results of an investigation ordered under a resolution by Senator Smith, Democrat, of South Carolina, were formerly parts of the "Tobacco Trust" dissolved by

nolds Company, the report said, was not a part of the alleged conspiracy and was commended for its opposition. The commission promised prosecutions where the evidence dis-closes there has been violations of law.

GEHANT-MAIER—

Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church in West Brooklyn the marriage of Miss Stella C. Gehant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Gehant, and Joseph E. Maier, son of Matthew Meier, took place. A nuptial high mass was celebrated by Rev. Michael Krug. The wedding march was played by Sister Ida.

The attendants were Miss Nora M. Maier, sister of the bridegroom, and Rae A. Arnold, cousin of the bride. The bride's gown was white satin, with silk lace overdress and pearl trimmings, and hat to match. She carried bride's roses. The bridegroom wore a suit of blue serge.

The bridesmaid, Miss Maier, was costumed in Nile green taffeta and wore a white hat. The groomsmen, Mr. Arnold, wore a suit of brown.

Immediately after the ceremony, the wedding party, consisting of the immediate relatives, departed for the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Gehant. At 12 o'clock a delicious four-course dinner was served by Mrs. John Malach, Jr., and Mrs. C. P. Henkel, both of West Brooklyn, and Miss Grace Ford of this city.

The centerpiece at the table was the attractive bride's cake, the rest of the table being charmingly decorated with pink and white carnations and ferns. The Gehant home was decorated in pink and white streamers and bells.

That evening Mr. and Mrs. Maier departed for northern points on their honeymoon and upon their return will be at home to their many friends on the farm of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Gehant. This young couple have the best wishes of many friends for a life of happiness and prosperity.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY—

The Legion Post No. 12 will assist and the American Legion Auxiliary have promised their aid.

Saturday will be Tag Day for the Salvation Army Relief fund and the committee having this in charge from the American Legion Auxiliary is composed of Mrs. Clea Bunnell, chairman; Mrs. Crawford, Mrs. Strub and Mrs. Horton. Members of this committee will meet Friday evening in Legion hall at 7:30. The headquarters will be an ante-room at G. A. R. hall and the workers will work from there. A house to house canvass is to be made and everyone in Dixon may expect to be tagged on that day, so citizens open your purse strings and assist those who did so much for the manhood of America over there. This organization, the Salvation Army, is the one which helps first and afterwards asks questions.

Mrs. Strub, the retiring president of the Auxiliary, was presented with a handsome Pyrex baking dish, the presentation being made by Mrs. Horton, voicing the appreciation of the members for the services of Mrs. Strub to the Auxiliary during her term of office. Mrs. Strub expressed her thanks in a few gracious words.

The Central delivered to the Northwestern early this morning two brand new street cars for Sterling. The cars are the latest models and look very fine. It is to be hoped that the people of Sterling will appreciate these new cars.

Trainmaster C. H. Bowen was here today transacting business with Agent Wood of the Northwestern. Roadmaster P. J. McAndrews was also here looking after the needs of the section men.

Mark Brown, one of the Avenue's popular truckman, of the firm of Brown & Daunter, is laid up with a crippled foot. He will, however, be ready for business in a few days. Mark has the sympathy of Avenue folk.

BENNIE GOES TO WORK.

This is likely surprise you, but it is reported that Bennie O'Malley is now in Sterling on his way to Moline where he will accept a job. He will visit in Sterling for a few days. And if he don't change his mind he will proceed to Moline where a good job is waiting for him.

ANOTHER CONTEST.

The Avenue enjoyed another contest Tuesday afternoon—a sweeping contest between Samuel Huggins and Groceryman Flemming. They cleaned the sidewalk off—which was a much needed thing to do. Flemming was handicapped from the start, having an apron on, but Huggins was fortunate to have the wind coming his way. Huggins won, but Flemming did a better job.

Charley Long from down in the loop, called on his friends here Tuesday afternoon.

"And Billy Jones calls me a young man," said Committeeman McIntyre. "I wish to thank him for the compliment, but I want him to know that I bought candy on the Avenue in 1864."

William Cahill was up from the loop this morning looking after interests. We saw our friends, Charles Godfrey, walking down the Avenue this morning. Charley doesn't often come this way, but he is welcome whenever he does venture up this way. We presume Charley was calling on his democratic friends.

The Rock River Valley Breeders Association will hold a meeting at the pavilion on the Avenue on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 25th. There will be important business to transact and a large attendance of stockholders is looked for.

HAS RADIOPHONE.

William Rush, proprietor of the Avenue's auto electric service station, is building a large radiophone that will have a range of 2,000 miles. He is now installing the receiving apparatus and later will install the sending apparatus, with almost the same range.

Mr. Rush was for some time engaged in the electrical business at Oshkosh, Wis., in 1905 and from 1911 to 1913 he was with the Illinois Naval Reserve at Chicago and obtained some valuable lessons in electricity while there.

In a few days he will have in working order a 100 volt battery to be used in sending messages through the air. When complete the Rush radiophone will be one of the largest and most complete in the northern Illinois.

Avenue people are always looking forward to do something for the benefit of chankling.

"We Do," is our motto.

JUNGLE

What's in the heart of the Congo jungle? Gorillas, big snakes, cannibals beating tom-toms and eating missionaries? That's the general notion. But there's something else.

Out of the heart of the Congo last year came 70,000,000 pounds of copper.

The white man is penetrating everywhere, and with him goes hard work, the price of this so-called civilization. Is it worth while? Or are savages happier before the white man brings the time-clock?

FIRE

Times must be getting better. Fire losses are dropping. Credit men say that's a sure sign of easier money conditions. Fewer business men are burning their properties to collect insurance for meeting bills.

$27,366,500 worth of buildings against $41,197,500 in December, 1920.

Since 1875, fire losses have totaled about $7,700,000,000 in the United States. We are a careless people—are sign of national wealth.

GOLD

Only $49,105,000 worth of gold mined in America last year. Multiply that by 1000 and you have the total income of all the people for the year—value of their crops, manufactures and labor.

Henry Ford wants to base money on the products of human energy, instead of gold. A banknote would be a mortgage on so many hours of work instead of a handful of gold.

America each year produces, by human labor, a total value five times as big as all the gold in the world.

CHANCE

The supposedly impossible happens again. Arthur Lucy swallows his false teeth, is rushed in a police ambulance to a hospital at Brockton, Mass. Doctors sharpen their knives and crowd around. Arthur's teeth are back in his mouth. He will recover.

The same day, word comes from Quebec province of a man who choked to death on a popcorn kernel. Life is uncertain. The unexpected often lies around the corner.

MOBS

A check-up shows that 3436 victims have been lynched by mobs since 1889. Only 17 per cent of them were accused of assaulting women. Lynched victims included 64 women.

Mob rule is government by minority—the very thing our republic was founded to avoid.

GAS

Not counting debate in Congress, Americans used 319,888,000 cubic feet of artificial gas last year.

This is an achievement, comparing it with a generation ago when mother had to wash the smoked chimneys of the kerosene oil lamps and trim their wicks daily.

In about one more generation, the only heating and lighting will be by electricity. A copper mine is a good legacy for grandchildren.

THE "COMMUNITY" NEWSPAPER

H. F. Harrington, of the Joseph Medill School of Journalism in Chicago, thinks the appellation "community" newspaper should be changed to "community" newspaper, because of its growing importance to the community in upbuilding all its institutions—religious, educational, social, political and commercial.

It is not through the efforts of the newspaper editor and staff alone that the rural or small town journal has come to this broader service. The people themselves are coming to better cooperation with their local papers. They realize that a newspaper is not merely a means for the distribution of news. They are turning to the paper as an educative medium along many lines. They turn to it as a willing force for promoting community enterprises and community spirit, and in this widening demand the newspaper finds encouragement for its widening policy. It is a mark of growth in which those who print and those who read take satisfaction.

WHAT IS ART?

Concerning the Better Homes Institute, Dr. Frank Crane writes: "The Chicago Art Institute is doing a work that is more fundamental in its nature and far reaching in its effects than any other work in the way of art that the world has ever seen."

"When you say 'art' to most people they think at once of stuffy museums that few will visit, or of rich men's houses that fewer CAN visit."

"Art is supposed to be a fad of the wealthy and leisure classes. And most artists further this idea by devoting their energies to pictures and statues and ornaments that only the well-to-do can buy."

"In other words, and in plain language artists ought to be making beautiful chairs, tables, beds, carpets, vases, cups, teapots, cradles, book-cases and cupboards for the millions instead of marble statues and rare landscapes for the few."

INSPIRING

The oldest married couple in the United States—James Bell and wife—have their home and all their savings destroyed by fire at Abrams, Wis.

He is 104 years old, she is 102. Discouraged? No!

"We'll start life all over again!" says Bell.

Mrs. Bell nods eagerly and adds, "I'll help."

That's inspiring to any one who is down in the mouth. It doesn't matter what happens to people, as long as they keep their grit. It's discouragement, not trouble, that brings ruin.

LOSING

A report now shows that the railroads, in the 12 months ended last Oct. 31, started building 405 miles of new lines—and abandoned 702 miles.

This is losing ground, decidedly. Civilization follows transportation.

The silver lining to this cloud is the construction of new railroad lines will soon be going ahead with the return of prosperity. America slows up occasionally, but the long-range tendency is always forward.

FENIAN

The Grim Reaper visits Boston and claims another picturesque old character—Colonel Roger F. Scannell. Grandpa will say, "I seem to recall the name."

Scannell appeared regularly in the newspaper headlines a half century ago. He was a leader of the Fenians, workers for Irish independence. They indirectly attacked Britain by making spectacular raids on Canada in 1866 and 1871.

Scannell lived to see the Irish Free State being born, and died knowing that a good cause never dies, always triumphs in the long run.

MUST!

Maine citizens are being tagged to subscribe to a fund to save their forests. Money will be used for planting trees.

States that still have big forest reserves should think this over twice. Why not state laws compelling the person who cut down a tree to plant one in its place? Otherwise, trees soon will be a curiosity. Forests are vanishing faster than the red Indian.

DRUNKARDS

The star salesman of a New York wholesale house gets up at the Salvation Army congress in Boston and tells how he "came back" after John Barleycorn had made him a Bowery "bum."

Other speakers follow him, with the same story.

This doesn't appeal to the imagination now, as it would have, a decade ago. For all people know, though they may not admit it except in their subconscious minds, that the drunk and soon will be a thing of the past.

The next generation will read Jack London's "John Barleycorn" with the same bewildered awe that we read De Quincey's "Confessions of an English Opium Eater."

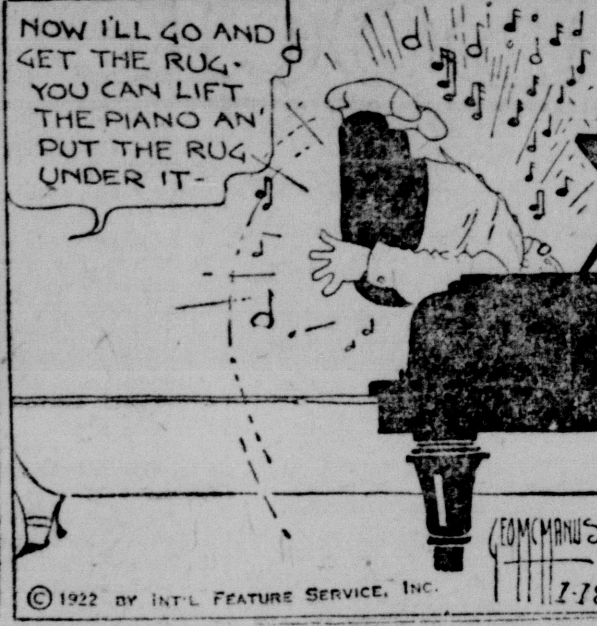

CHIMNEYS

Defective chimneys and flues caused a loss by fires, of $71,037,084 worth of dwelling houses in the last six years says an insurance organization. That's only a part of the story, for it doesn't include property not insured. Observe that all these fires were preventable. So, for that matter, are practically all fires.

Inspect your chimney. If full of soot, it may catch fire. Often the chimney soot can be removed by burning some potato peelings.

There is not a mile of railroad in Afghanistan.

ANTHRAX

Common Sense Ways to Keep Well

The bacteria of anthrax was one of the first discovered by science. It is so large that it is readily seen through imperfect, low power microscopes.

Anthrax is a disease frequent in cows and horses and rather infrequent in man. Human anthrax is found in several different varieties. In the majority of cases the germ gets into the tissues through a wound or lesion of the skin. The fact that the germ itself is so large probably accounts for its being held near the point where it entered the body.

It usually results in a carbuncle on the face. In a small percentage of cases the carbuncle is on the hands or arms. There is no way to discern whether this carbuncle is an ordinary one or that of anthrax except by examining the blood for anthrax bacilli under the microscope. This form of anthrax is not as violent as others, since two-thirds of these cases get well.

No doubt some cases of anthrax are diagnosed as ordinary carbuncles. If the patient were not a dairyman, hostler, shepherd, butcher, tanner, wool sorter or rag picker it would hardly occur to the physician to examine the secretion of the carbuncle under the microscope.

Internal anthrax, which is more common in Europe among the peasantry, is usually fatal. The disease starts with a sharp rise of temperature. The fever is high. The patient vomits blood. Carbuncles of the skin may appear. If the physician gets suspicious and examines the discharge for bacilli he discovers the disease, otherwise not.

Anthrax, as a disease of humans, has never been, is not and probably never will be a disease of first importance. The ordinary man engaged in the ordinary work of society is in practically no danger from it.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem INTENTIONS

There's a lot of letters I ought to write To friends I've seriously neglected; I think my missives might bring delight

Perhaps the more if they're unexpected;

I ought to show that I still devote Some time and thought to their joy or sorrow, So I'll scribble each of my friends a note— Tomorrow!

There's a lot of books that I ought to read, Books on science and art and beauty And classic stuff that I really need, Perusing which is a bounden duty.

I must start in on a reading course, Buying what books I cannot borrow, I'm gonna begin with vim and force— Tomorrow!

On several of my nearby neighbors; And I ought to aid, for charity's sake, The poor in all of their weary labors. I've never shared in my neighbor's grief

Nor worried about his joy or sorrow, Nor I'm gonna turn over a brand new leaf— Tomorrow!

There is a proverb I know full well Which, more or less succinctly, mentions That most of the pavements down in hell

Are builded largely of good intentions So I'd better put some of my notions through, For there ain't much credit a guy can borrow, Because of things he was gonna do— Tomorrow!

DICK EXPLAINS HIS DISAPPEARANCE

"And you decided not to write to me?" So I reproached Jimmy. "How could I do otherwise? Mrs. Scott, you see that I couldn't? I had no profession—not a dollar of my own! Not even a clean name to offer her! Moreover, my future belonged to my father! It was up to his son to pay off his creditors!"

"I agree with you, Jimmy," said Mother, "but I guess yours is not the business ethics of your time, dear boy!"

"Since I was mortgaged indefinitely to my father, I could not remind May of my existence. I caught the ship as my father had planned. May and I had parted during my voyage."

"When I reached London, my uncle handed me a cablegram, New York attorneys informed him that my father was bankrupt. A second cable, that he was dead. A third, that I had disappeared."

"The news of my father's suicide paralyzed me. For I knew at once that he had deliberately driven his car over the edge of the quarry. You can see that I wanted to be alone to think things out for myself."

"I refused to go to my uncle's house. In a London hotel, I stayed awake all night and figured out why my father had tramped me."

"He sent you away to keep you from being connected with his mysterious death?" ventured Mother. "To free me from any responsibility for the affair, I usually drove the car—he loathed being his own chauffeur. I knew the town—and so did he. People would say that I had run off with what I could lay my hands on—and that the car—did not go over the cliff—by accident!"

"The townspeople never would guess that your father sent you away because he intended to take his own life!" exclaimed Mother. "Why didn't you return, Jimmy, and explain?"

"Did I care what the gossips thought and said? Not I! And what else was there to come back to? The business was in the hands of a committee of my father's creditors. There was May to return to but I had nothing to offer her."

"Your uncle—why did he not help you?"

"My uncle is a very successful man who despises failures, I and my father were failures, to him. After a sleepless night in the London hotel I checked out and disappeared. I wandered hopelessly, aimlessly, like a soldier suffering from shell shock."

"I had not been trained for a profession. I was to inherit my father's interests. One evening I wandered into a cinema palace. I wanted to forget, if only for an hour."

"And there it occurred to me that I could support myself in the movies. I had made a hit as the villain in more than one college play. I look the part you know, Max?"

"I can't see that you do!"

I touched my bandaged lids and we three laughed gaily as people do, over nothing, when their nerves are on edge.

It means—to hide, conceal, mask, pretend.

It comes from—Latin "dis," away from, and English "semble." Companion word—dissembler. It's used like this—"Though he had heard bad news, he dissembled his grief at the party."

BUSKINS' POEM

Many of the Fairy Queen's little elves do ride in soap bubble cars

Buskins took Nancy and Nick back to the apple-tree elevator when they were ready to leave the Land of Lost Balloons.

"There are other countries for you to see in the Kingdom of Up in the Air," said the little fairyman, pulling at the iron handle on the side of the car. "So many things make straight for the blue sky the minute they get loose, that we have to have all sorts of countries for them to stay in. How about going to Soap Bubble Land next?"

"Oh, that would be lovely," cried Nancy. "I've always wondered where the soap-bubbles went when they floated off away up into the air over our heads."

"I sometimes pretend that I am inside of them," said Nick. "I pretend that I am a fairy and the soap-bubbles are cars, and I go on travels."

"Well, well," said Buskins, "that's an idea. But to tell the truth, many of the Fairy Queen's little elves do ride in soap-bubble cars. Have you ever heard the poem about it?"

"No, no!" cried the children. "Do you know it, Buskins? Won't you tell us?"

"We have a minute or so before we arrive, so I'll say what I know," said the fairyman. "It goes this way—"

"All aboard for a ride in the soap-bubble car, With walls of finest glass, It is round like the moon and shines like a star, And its passengers are first class. It spins like a top and rolls like a ball And can travel upside down. It needs no track and no engine at all, And its station is Soap Bubble Town."

The fairies ride 'round in this wonderful car, All painted with purple and blue, And blow kisses down to the earth so far, Like folks on a journey. Like folks on a journey do."

"That's all," said Buskins. "Here we are!"

THE WATER-HOLE

"SENTIMENT" THEME OF EDITORIAL BY FORMER DIXONITE

C. C. Backus Wrote Expressive Article for Simco News.

Carl C. Backus, former Dixon young man, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Backus of this city, who is now Associate Editor of the Simco News, a publication of the Simmons Co., of Kenosha, several thousand copies of which are regularly published and distributed free among employees of the company, had a very expressive editorial on "Sentiment" in an issue of the News recently, following his return from a visit in Chicago. The editorial was:

We had just a lovely Christmas, and have every reason to feel thankful for our condition—but found this year, sentiment creeping in, where it formerly did not exist. Possibly we grow old. Possibly the world conditions have made us think more deeply than we used to. In any event, we had a fine dinner, with all of our family, including father and mother present, and in good health. That ought to make one feel good, and we did feel fine, right up to the point where we took father and mother to the station to take their train for home, and bade them good-bye at the train gate, and then as they walked down the platform to their car, arm in arm, more stooped than of yore, and slowly faded from view like a faded out in a moving picture—a great lump came into our throat, and a tear rolled down the cheek, and we just wanted to sit down and cry—and then we wanted to rush through those gates with our own family and go on home with them. Sentiment.

And then we thought how foolish it was, and how thankful we ought to be that we had them both, and in such health that they could come to a big city like Chicago to spend the day with us, and this line of thought cheered us up and we felt pretty good until Monday, when, picking up a morning paper we saw a fine vanderbilt bill advertised for presentation at the Majestic Theatre—a number of old friends, including Ernest Ball, the composer, the Watson Sisters, and Eddie Leonard, the greatest minstrel of them all. Ernest Ball was the first of the old favorites on, and he brought our spirits up, for he was as good as of yore, and the Watson Sisters seem not to have altered one whit—but when Eddie Leonard came on for his turn, that blooming sentiment got us again. Through the burnt cork, we could see the lines, and the veins standing out, and the wig didn't hide the thinning hair, and the great audience who cheered him again and again finally compelled him to make a curtain speech in which he acknowledged that he was growing old, and that he would have to ask them to excuse his further effort, and then when they actually demanded more, he sang "Boola Boola Eyes" his song hit with the Cohan & Harris Minstrels away back in 1893, and that darned tear came rolling down the cheek again. And so while we had a lovely time, we were glad to board a train for Kenosha, and open the front door at home, and have the old dog jump all over our good clothes with his dirty paws and try to kiss our face, and tell us, in his own way, that he wasn't growing old, and didn't care whether we were or not. Sentiment is a queer thing, isn't it?

Chicago Police to Have Radio Phones

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Chicago policemen soon will be provided with wireless telephones according to plans which became known today. According to William G. Keith, superintendent of the city department of electricity, every policeman will be provided with an outfit by the end of the year. The first instrument will be ready within a few weeks, Mr. Keith said. As now adjusted patrolmen merely can receive messages, but it is planned to perfect the instruments so that later messages also can be sent.

EVANGELIST PAINTS DARK PICTURE "SIN" AT FRANKLIN MEET

vivals Conducted By Rev. Jarboe.

Franklin Grove.—Rev. Jarboe said in one of his sermons, "I have a dark picture to present to you, it's the picture of sin. It's not a desirable subject to speak upon and God knows too many ministers avoid denouncing the modern evils of the day for fear of losing their job or hurting some one's feeling—but duty demands that we as His messengers denounce with all our power, sin in its various forms, which is dragging men and women down to perdition."

The evangelist in a convincing manner showed the evil results of some of the modern forms of amusements—the card party, dance, theater and movie being especially emphasized.

In another discourse on the subject of "Bankable Notes," Rev. Jarboe said: "Many notes are not bankable because of the signature of an unreliable party, but the notes (God's promise) written on the bank of heaven payable to you and me, signed by Jesus Christ, are all bankable at their face value, for none of God's promises are unfulfilled."

"God Is Love." Another very impressive discourse was on the subject of God's love. The greatest sentence ever written is, God is love. My text, however, is "As a mother loves her child so do I love you." Can a mother forget her child? The love of a true mother that will cause her to sacrifice any true comfort for her offspring that would make her willing to go to the gallows or grave for a wayward son is the best thing on earth to give us a faint conception of the love of God. Rev. Jarboe made a strong plea for more Christian homes.

"A nation does not rise higher than her homes. The world looks to us as a Christian nation—do we deserve the name? Men—women, what are you doing to make this nation what it should be? Many of you fathers and mothers think more of the finance of your children than of their souls. Husbands—fathers, your wife is under no more obligation to your home and children than you. The greatest need of America is more Christian homes. A certain judge who sent 2,700 boys to reform school said none of them came from Christian homes." The revival continues with increased interest. The public is cordially invited.

The STEP on the STAIRS

by ISABEL OSTRANDER

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

The report of a revolver, followed by hurrying footsteps on the stairs, interrupted the social evening which Detective Barry had planned to spend with his friend, Professor Semyonov, in the latter's room on the fifth floor of a New York apartment house. Barry and the Professor rushed down stairs and discovered that beautiful Miriam Vane, society portrait painter, had been murdered in her studio apartment on the third floor. Gordon Ladd, a young artist on the second floor, and Henry Griswold, an irascible bachelor from the fourth, enter the studio after being told of the murder.

GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Sergeant Barry shrugged. "When a case of this sort occurs, professor, there's little time for diplomacy. We've got to get the dope and get it quick. So you, too, heard that step on the stairs directly after the shot was fired?"

Professor Semyonov laid a quick hand on his arm.

"We will discuss that later, my friend." His keen eyes beneath their shaggy brows rested for a moment on the crabbled face of Henry Griswold and then drifted to Gordon Ladd, who had once more dropped his head in his hands. "Let us have a little talk together in my rooms, as soon as the official formalities have been complied with, which will grant us temporary privacy."

Policeman Boyle descended with unexpected haste.

"That's one of those nutty artistic dames up there, with hair like a sky-terrier and the nerve of a mouse!" he confided in a quick undertone to Barry.

In the shabby, comfortable living room once more, the professor lowered the light and raised the window shades with a sigh of relief, then turned to his younger companion.

"What do you make of it all, Sergeant? Who do you think killed the Vane woman, and why?"

Barry shrugged.

"The last part of your question would explain each, professor, and I haven't had time to draw any definite conclusions as yet, have you?"

Professor Semyonov sank once more into his own chair and motioned to the one opposite.

"Only some very obvious minor ones," he responded. "She was shot by no stranger, but by someone whose presence in her studio at the moment was known to her. Remember she was standing or sitting directly before her easel and evidently painting or starting to paint when the end came. No intruder could have got so close to her, or practically between her and the easel in order to fire directly into her heart without her knowledge. It is possible that she turned to speak to this person and thus unwittingly gave opportunity for an unimpeded aim. I think it is fairly certain that she did not anticipate what was coming."

Barry nodded. "That seems clear. But about those footsteps that we both heard going down the stairs when we opened your door here just after the shot started us?"

"Going up, my friend, not down," the professor interrupted.

"Up?" repeated Barry. "Why we passed nobody on the stairs, and there are only two other apartments—Griswold's below you, and the woman above in the attic. According to Officer Boyle the woman went into hysteria when she heard the news and you know yourself how you had to pound Griswold's door to arouse him and how leisurely and reluctantly he came down. Finally to investigate! There did not seem to be anywhere in the hallway, badly lighted as it was, where anyone could have hidden himself."

Professor Semyonov smiled and his white whiskers lifted slightly. "I am not thinking of the woman," he said. "Nor do I imagine that we passed anyone unobserved in our descent, hurried as it was."

"Who was Miriam Vane? From whence did she come? If the excellent organization of which you are a part should in the next few days learn anything of Mrs. Vane's antecedents or previous history and associates which is not given out generally to the press, would it be too great a breach of professional etiquette to put me into strictly confidential possession of it?"

"By no means, professor, in view not only of your standing but of the splendid services you have rendered voluntarily to the homicide bureau in the past," Barry responded.

"I shall be grateful," the professor declared. "I know nothing, absolutely nothing more than you and yet I have formed a theory which I should like to test and which I think only Mrs. Vane's past will prove or disprove."

Sergeant Barry smiled to himself, though not a muscle of his countenance betrayed his inward amusement. He thought that he knew what that theory, engendered by an almost childish personal animosity, consisted of and he was glad to humor the fancies of this old man, so great in his own line.

"Just what is generally known about Mrs. Vane, beyond the prominence her odd style of portraiture has brought her lately?" he asked.

"I know only what I have seen casually in the papers about her and what Mrs. Mettrath, entirely without encouragement, has volunteered," replied the professor. "Mrs. Vane arrived last October from France I believe. It was some two months later that her vogue began and spread like wildfire, so that by spring she was quite famous."

"There can be no doubt of her strange, whimsical talent," Barry remarked. "That unfinished portrait before which she lies dead, for instance, it is as unmistakably recognizable as a photograph. I fancy Mr. Theodore Vansittart would give something to have his wife's picture removed before the notoriety of tomorrow."

Professor Semyonov nodded slowly.

"You observed the most prominent thing in the portrait, did you not?" he asked. "The Vansittart emerald? It has figured in more than one uneasy episode in the traditions of its history, yet it is the pride of the family. Perhaps that is the reason why Mrs. Vane has, one might say, maliciously emphasized it. The portrait was to have been that of a jewel, not a lady."

"And the critics will fall upon that fact like dogs upon a bone!" Barry laughed and then his face sobered.

"How long have the other tenants been in the house, Professor Semyonov?"

"The thin, little creature in the attic studio was here when I came, two years ago next October, and heaven knows how long before that," he responded. "The young man, Mr. Ladd, moved in only three months ago, on the first of May, and my morose neighbor, just below, took possession a year before that after I myself had been here six or seven months. The janitor, or superintendent, looks as though he might have been the furnace man for the original householders and his name I believe to be Kedge."

As he spoke there came a respectful but authoritative knock upon his door and he arose with a sigh and waddled over to admit a long-armed, wiry young man whose blue eyes were as keen as Barry's own.

"Hello, Craig!" the latter cried before either of the others could speak.

"Did the chief send you over from headquarters to take charge of the case?" Mr. Semyonov, this is Sergeant Craig, from the homicide bureau."

"I guess we all know what Professor Semyonov has done for us in times past. The newcomer laughed as he shook hands, then turned frankly to Barry. "I don't know why the chief assigned me to this job when you were already on the ground, John, but orders are orders and I'll be thankful for a little unofficial co-operation."

"I've got to interview the other tenants of the house," said Craig. "Are there any pointers you could give me first?"

"You haven't seen them?"

"No. I read the statements they made to the precinct dicks and then came straight for you. They're each in their own apartments with a guard on each landing and two on the street below, one at the entrance door and one where the fire escape comes down outside the studios, by that vacant strip of land. There's no other way of them can get out for Boyle and the other two went over the roof thoroughly," Craig replied. "It looks like an inside job all right, for Boyle was right outside the house when he heard the shot fired and nobody could have come out of the door or down the fire escape without his seeing them."

"What did the medical examiner say?" Barry asked after a pause, in a cautious undertone.

"Not much; you know he's always like a clam until he gets his report in at headquarters, and he has still the autopsy to make," the other responded. "It was a bullet from a small pistol that killed her, though it was fired from a considerable distance, for there were no powder marks on the body nor anywhere else that we could find. Come down to the studio where the murder was committed yourself and have another look around; the tenants can wait."

Barry agreed with a nod and together they descended past Griswold's door where a grinning policeman snatched them.

"Going up, my friend, not down," the professor interrupted.

"Up?" repeated Barry. "Why we passed nobody on the stairs, and there are only two other apartments—Griswold's below you, and the woman above in the attic. According to Officer Boyle the woman went into hysteria when she heard the news and you know yourself how you had to pound Griswold's door to arouse him and how leisurely and reluctantly he came down. "There can be no doubt of her strange, whimsical talent," Barry remarked. "That unfinished portrait before which she lies dead, for instance, it is as unmistakably recognizable as a photograph. I fancy Mr. Theodore Vansittart would give something to have his wife's picture removed before the notoriety of tomorrow."

Professor Semyonov nodded slowly.

"You observed the most prominent thing in the portrait, did you not?" he asked. "The Vansittart emerald? It has figured in more than one uneasy episode in the traditions of its history, yet it is the pride of the family. Perhaps that is the reason why Mrs. Vane has, one might say, maliciously emphasized it. The portrait was to have been that of a jewel, not a lady."

"And the critics will fall upon that fact like dogs upon a bone!" Barry laughed and then his face sobered.

"How long have the other tenants been in the house, Professor Semyonov?"

"The thin, little creature in the attic studio was here when I came, two years ago next October, and heaven knows how long before that," he responded. "The young man, Mr. Ladd, moved in only three months ago, on the first of May, and my morose neighbor, just below, took possession a year before that after I myself had been here six or seven months. The janitor, or superintendent, looks as though he might have been the furnace man for the original householders and his name I believe to be Kedge."

As he spoke there came a respectful but authoritative knock upon his door and he arose with a sigh and waddled over to admit a long-armed, wiry young man whose blue eyes were as keen as Barry's own.

"Hello, Craig!" the latter cried before either of the others could speak.

"Did the chief send you over from headquarters to take charge of the case?" Mr. Semyonov, this is Sergeant Craig, from the homicide bureau."

"I guess we all know what Professor Semyonov has done for us in times past. The newcomer laughed as he shook hands, then turned frankly to Barry. "I don't know why the chief assigned me to this job when you were already on the ground, John, but orders are orders and I'll be thankful for a little unofficial co-operation."

"I've got to interview the other tenants of the house," said Craig. "Are there any pointers you could give me first?"

"You haven't seen them?"

"No. I read the statements they made to the precinct dicks and then came straight for you. They're each in their own apartments with a guard on each landing and two on the street below, one at the entrance door and one where the fire escape comes down outside the studios, by that vacant strip of land. There's no other way of them can get out for Boyle and the other two went over the roof thoroughly," Craig replied. "It looks like an inside job all right, for Boyle was right outside the house when he heard the shot fired and nobody could have come out of the door or down the fire escape without his seeing them."

"What did the medical examiner say?" Barry asked after a pause, in a cautious undertone.

"Not much; you know he's always like a clam until he gets his report in at headquarters, and he has still the autopsy to make," the other responded. "It was a bullet from a small pistol that killed her, though it was fired from a considerable distance, for there were no powder marks on the body nor anywhere else that we could find. Come down to the studio where the murder was committed yourself and have another look around; the tenants can wait."

Barry agreed with a nod and together they descended past Griswold's door where a grinning policeman snatched them.

"Going up, my friend, not down," the professor interrupted.

"Up?" repeated Barry. "Why we passed nobody on the stairs, and there are only two other apartments—Griswold's below you, and the woman above in the attic. According to Officer Boyle the woman went into hysteria when she heard the news and you know yourself how you had to pound Griswold's door to arouse him and how leisurely and reluctantly he came down. Finally to investigate! There did not seem to be anywhere in the hallway, badly lighted as it was, where anyone could have hidden himself."

Professor Semyonov smiled and his white whiskers lifted slightly. "I am not thinking of the woman," he said. "Nor do I imagine that we passed anyone unobserved in our descent, hurried as it was."

"Who was Miriam Vane? From whence did she come? If the excellent organization of which you are a part should in the next few days learn anything of Mrs. Vane's antecedents or previous history and associates which is not given out generally to the press, would it be too great a breach of professional etiquette to put me into strictly confidential possession of it?"

"By no means, professor, in view not only of your standing but of the splendid services you have rendered voluntarily to the homicide bureau in the past," Barry responded.

"I shall be grateful," the professor declared. "I know nothing, absolutely nothing more than you and yet I have formed a theory which I should like to test and which I think only Mrs. Vane's past will prove or disprove."

Sergeant Barry smiled to himself, though not a muscle of his countenance betrayed his inward amusement. He thought that he knew what that theory, engendered by an almost childish personal animosity, consisted of and he was glad to humor the fancies of this old man, so great in his own line.

"Just what is generally known about Mrs. Vane, beyond the prominence her odd style of portraiture has brought her lately?" he asked.

"I know only what I have seen casually in the papers about her and what Mrs. Mettrath, entirely without encouragement, has volunteered," replied the professor. "Mrs. Vane arrived last October from France I believe. It was some two months later that her vogue began and spread like wildfire, so that by spring she was quite famous."

"There can be no doubt of her strange, whimsical talent," Barry remarked. "That unfinished portrait before which she lies dead, for instance, it is as unmistakably recognizable as a photograph. I fancy Mr. Theodore Vansittart would give something to have his wife's picture removed before the notoriety of tomorrow."

WHY WOMEN GET DESPONDENT

Are not women naturally as light-hearted, brave and hopeful as men? Yes, certainly; but a woman's organism is essentially different from a man's—more delicate, more sensitive and more exacting. Women in delicate health are more dependent, more nervous, more irritable and more dependent. When a woman develops nervousness, sleeplessness, backaches, dragging-down pains and melancholia she should lose no time in giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial, as it will quickly dispel such troubles. This root and herb medicine contains no drugs and has been the standby of American womanhood for nearly fifty years.—Adv.

JUST GOT OVER A COLD?

Look out for kidney troubles and backache. Colds overtax the kidneys and often leave them weak. For weak kidneys—well, read what a Dixon man says:

Geo. L. Richardson, retired farmer, 402 Lincoln Ave., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills for some years off and on as a tonic for my kidneys and they have kept them active and healthy. I had signs of kidney disorder such as a heavy full feeling across my back just over my kidneys, especially when I took cold. The kidney secretions were somewhat retarded at times. Doan's Kidney Pills have proved a very valuable remedy in curing these attacks. They keep me in pretty good health for a man of my age. I can recommend Doan's to old people."
